In Quelimane, most registration brigade members are Frelimo

Two-thirds of the registration brigade members in Quelimane are from a list compiled by Frelimo.

MDM accuses STAE of having selected members preferentially from this list, which MDM says was submitted to STAE by Frelimo. Luis Cavala, director of STAE Quelimane, denies this, saying that it was an open competition and that the choices were made based on the documents submitted by the candidates.

Although government institutions normally publish lists of candidates selected and rejected, Cavala refused to show them to us. However, we have copies of the STAE list and the Frelimo list (see photos) which shows:

- + Of 248 candidates, STAE selected 74 (30%).
- + Of these, 46 (62%) were on a list compiled by Frelimo.
- + Of the 67 names on the Frelimo list, 63 were considered by STAE. Of these, 46 (73%) were selected to be registration brigade members.

COMMENT: It is not illegal or improper for a political party to organise and prepare members to be candidates for jobs in the electoral process. What is not permitted is for the party to use influence to promote selection of its candidates, which this is what MDM alleges happened in Quelimane.

With the new structure of STAE involving many more party nominations, this will be much more of an issue. Each party will try to promote its members in selection processes while trying to prevent other parties from doing the same thing. tr

Asleep in Marracuene

In Marracuene district, a tour by our correspondent of registration posts in Habel Jafar, Ricatlha and Guava showed them virtually abandoned and empty, with registration staff sometimes asleep for lack of would-be voters (see photo). When interviewed Friday in Haebl Jafar, registration head Filomena Lopes said that they had only registered 100 voters. "This morning, we only registered four people. Perhaps more will come this afternoon."

Meanwhile, in Marracueue, Renamo, which had boycotted the November 2013 local elections, has launched a local campaign to mobilise its members to register.
