WORLD CUSTOMS DAY

The World Customs Day celebrated on the 26th January in more than 120 countries integrated on the World Customs Organization, with a sole purpose of developing the technical cooperation within the customs administrations towards the simplification and harmonization of the international standards, was celebrated in the current year under the topic "Communication: Sharing Information for a better Cooperation."

In this context, the Mozambique Revenue Authority (AT) marked the date in Tete with replication in the northern and southern regional directorates of the country through sporting activities and lectures focusing on advances driven by the implementation of the modern technologies in the revenue sector and in particular the Single Electronic Window (SeW).

The topic chosen by the international organism aligns with the assumptions of the introduction of the SeW system that forecast on its implementation plan the interconnection with some neighboring countries for a safe and efficient information exchange related to the cross-border trade.

During the events that counted with the participation of several stakeholders, was extolled the new form of communication to the stakeholders involved in the external trade and customs that base on the international best practices, providing the fast assimilation need under penalty of exclusion and downgrade.

NEW MODULES IN PREPARATION TO START

Container Terminal

Petroleum Products Terminal

The implementation of the new modules and functionalities, whose preparation process includes users training sessions, sensitization actions between customs officers affected at customs areas as well as the several users of the public services provided through SeW, essentially aims to guaranty that the new functionalities respond to the real users needs for a slow migration of the actual environment to the electronic.

The temporary import and export module, foreseen on the article 21 of Ministerial Diploma 16/2012 that approves customs clearance of goods, constitutes one of the modules being implemented and that will allow the submission of several stakeholders' requests electronically.

Must be referred that with the introduction of this special regime in SeW, that culminates with the duties and other taxes payment suspension for the goods, increase the mechanism efficiency in the custom control that there are subjected to.

With the manual process migration of this regime to SeW, economic agents will be having major facilitation on the submission of the information and possibility to monitor goods permanence period with transparency avoiding eventual fines resulting from the inobservance of the deadlines allowed.

Petroleum products module that in future will be processed in SeW on an experimental regime as a form of preparation for the migration, and had been target of several reflection sessions to accommodate the actual procedures as well as the inherits particularities to the types of products.

The list of new modules also integrates overstayed cargo management that will allow an easy and efficient deadline management with the possibility of making auctions process easy and control the different cargo terminals performances.
